I mentored Kevin during his 4th-year Computer Science Project course which involved full-stack development integrated with blockchain technology along with a significant research component. Kevin has solid programming, system administration, DevOps, and documentation skills. He is also very good at contributing ideas during collaborative sessions and effectively addresses challenges when they arise. His proactive and detail-oriented approach, combined with his ability to work independently, set him apart. As such, Kevin is a valuable addition to any team and he can be trusted to see the project to fruition.

I had the pleasure of managing Kevin from May 2020 until June 2021 while he was an intern working on the Kogito cloud team.

Kevin is very thorough with his tasks. He thinks through the issue, tries to address all the corner cases and thinks about the impact his changes will have.

He is transparent and open. If there are any challenges he will bring them up early to let people know about potential impacts. He participates in discussions with the team to let them know about what his thoughts are to help the team work through potential problems.

He is self motivated, trustworthy and capable in his tasks. He led the helm chart proof of concept work and led discussions with architects and other leads on the team. When assigning a task, there is a high confidence that the task will be completed in a satisfactory manner.

I worked closely with Kevin at Red Hat and he was a great mentor and coworker. He helped me onboard onto the team quickly and helped me understand cloud technologies pertaining to our project. His expertise with Linux was impressive and he was able to clearly share his knowledge with me. Kevin was also an intern so I greatly appreciated his willingness to go the extra mile to make sure I was up to speed and able to excel as a new hire!

Kevin helped me on a prototype use of blockchain technology for natural area protection. He helped organise the team, shaped the architecture and leaned in some of the coding too - all while studying. Recommended.

Kevin helped a lot on building the release pipeline. Always contributing and bringing his view and ideas on the pipeline and identifying pain points as well as proposing solutions.
